Foreword

The Department of Health and Human Services is the federal government's principal agency for furthering the good health of Americans and providing them with essential human services.

Renamed from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, HHS is responsible for more than 300 programs. These programs are conducted by 150,000 employees at work in every state and territory and in many countries of the world.

With special emphasis on those least able to help themselves, HHS provides services that protect and advance the quality of life for all Americans.

The name is new but the roots of the Department of Health and Human Services go back to the earliest days of this nation—to 1798, when the first marine hospital, a forerunner of today's Public Health Service, was established to care for seafarers . . . and to 1887, when the federal government opened a one-room laboratory on Staten Island for research on disease and thereby planted the seed that was to grow into the National Institutes of Health . . . and to 1906, when Congress passed the first Food and Drug Act authorizing the government to monitor the purity of foods and the safety of medicines, a responsibility now lodged in the department's Food and Drug Administration.

Other roots go back to 1912, when President Theodore Roosevelt's first White House Conference urged creation of the Children's Bureau to combat exploitation of children . . . and to the 1930s, when Congress passed the Social Security Act.

On July 1, 1939, the disparate but closely related federal activities in the fields of health, education, social insurance and human services were brought together in the new Federal Security Agency.

The department's immediate forerunner was created on April 11, 1953, when President Eisenhower signed legislation establishing the Cabinet-level Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

In the mid-1960s, historic legislation created the Medicare and Medicaid programs making comprehensive health care available to millions of Americans and engaging the department in one of the largest-scale civilian management efforts in history.

The department grew during a quarter century as Congress translated the social conscience of the American people into programs to meet human needs.

On October 17, 1979, President Carter signed into law the Department of Education Organization Act, providing for establishment of a separate Department of Education and for redesignation of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as the new Department of Health and Human Services. HHS officially arrived on May 4, 1980 (from "This is HHS").

Therefore with this catalog we wish to give a concise picture and aid in the total information flow concerned with this Department.

General Information

EXPLANATION

The Publications Catalog of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services utilizes Anglo-American cataloging rules and Library of Congress main entries. Subjects are derived from Library of Congress Subject Headings. (Exceptions noted by an * in the index are National Library of Medicine Subject Headings). The catalog consists of text and five indexes—Author, title, subject, series/report number, and stock number.

PRICES

Prices are subject to change without notice. Since this catalog contains items which were up to 18 months old at the time of publication, users of the catalog are not advised to rely upon it as an authoritative guide for ordering publications sold by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office or the National Technical Information Service. Persons wishing to purchase publications are encouraged to contact the appropriate sales agency to determine the current selling price and availability of items desired.

UNLISTED ITEMS

If an item is not found in this publication it was not published within the catalog time span or was not sent to the Superintendent of Documents for cataloging within the time span. All Government publications are required by the "Government Printing and Binding Regulations" to be automatically sent to the Superintendent of Documents for cataloging.

MAJOR SOURCES OF HHS PUBLICATIONS AND INFORMATION

Publications entered in this catalog that are for sale by the Superintendent of Documents are indicated by a "for sale" statement in the text entries. Entries for publications sold by the National Technical Information Service (NTIS) include a statement to that effect. Unless otherwise indicated, publications are distributed by the issuing office which appears immediately before the publication date in each entry. Additional information necessary for procuring documents appears above or within text entries. Requests to issuing offices should contain titles, dates and as much other identifying information as possible.
